

Continuing Professional Development

What is Continuing Professional Development?

This is defined as:

- Continuing – a lifelong process of learning from the point of basic qualification.
- Professional – related to your therapies and their supporting topics, which enable you to work in a professional manner.
- Development – activities that facilitate the maintenance, updating and broadening of your professional abilities and moving towards achieving your full potential.

CPD is a mandatory part of Voluntary Self Regulation and required for

- listing on the ACHO/BFVEA/ACTO Professional Practitioner Registers

Standards for Continuing Professional Development:

Requirement:

- to maintain a continuous, up-to-date and accurate record of CPD activities containing evidence of CPD upon request.
- to show a mixture of CPD activities that are relevant to current or future practice.
- to ensure that CPD is relevant and benefits the role you have in Registered Professional Practitioners.

What this means:

- a record of CPD needs to be kept, in whatever format is most convenient
- ensure that CPD is a mixture of different kinds of activities and is used as a tool to maintain and as necessary improve skills.
- if requested annually or on the annual random audit, that the CPD profile is submitted to a professional body to show that the standards have been met.

Activities:

- CPD activity can include: in-service training, mentoring, reading, writing or reviewing journal or online articles, attending meetings, visiting exhibitions, specialist study days, other courses relevant to your skills and professional development, conferences, practitioner support meetings, seminars, running workshops, taking part in organisation of a therapy group or association, having therapy sessions, being mentored or supervised, tutorials, research.
- There is plenty of flexibility for planning CPD in a way that suits the individual's work, learning needs, preferences and the time and resources available.

Continuous Professional Development - The way it works:

Most professions require a minimum of 12-15 hours.

It is a good idea to choose from at least two types of activities in each year.

It is important to identify areas where CPD would benefit knowledge, skill and practice. If a required topic cannot be found, contact a former tutor, school or ACHO/BFVEA or ACTO for suggestions.

CPD Portfolio:

The Portfolio is the ongoing CPD record. It will keep a record of activities and can show where learning needs and support are required. It will provide a long-term record of professional development. As CPD is a mandatory part of VSR registration a portfolio may be audited. If it is called in under the random annual check, it will need to be up-to-date. It is important to make it part of your professional practice.

Putting your profile together:

The Continuous Professional Development (CPD) profile can include:

- A brief summary of professional practice or activity history for the past year. (Remember any cases included should be confidential)
- A statement or list of how the standards of CPD have been met.
- Evidence to support that statement or list.
(certificates, personal journal, Minutes of meetings etc)

CPD Audit

The Audit process:

Every time the Practitioner Register registration is renewed it will indicate confirmation that the standards for CPD have been met. A copy of the current insurance certificate will still be needed.

CPD records may need to be submitted at this time.

If the professional register has an audit process , it is likely to be random. The first audit will take place in 2011 to give time for all concerned to keep adequate records.

Copies of documents:

Only copies of supporting documents should be sent on request as submitted documents will not be returned.
